"It is declaration of absence of conflict of interest complying with Italian regulation DL269/2003, which is a standard regulation that defines and identifies the conflict-of-interest tipology in accordance with EU recommendations. In general terms, under this law one is requested to identify the relevant research and educational activities that may be affected by the financial or ownership interest that one, his/her spouse, dependent children or other members of his/her personal household may have. For example, a typical conflict of interest may arise if you deliver a lecture on the pharmacological treatment of a disease being directly funded by a pharmaceutical company that manufactures and/or sells a drug that may be used for the treatment of that disease. This is a perfectly legitimate situation but you are requested to disclose the potential conflict of interest."
